3. Level/year at which this course is offered: (.....level7....)

4. Course general Description:

This course is an introduction to the study of linguistic change. Various models of language change are explored to seek to understand how and why languages change. This will be done by drawing from a wide range of languages to explore changes at all levels of the grammar (phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics, etc.) and the various factors that can contribute to linguistic change. This course will discuss how it is possible to reconstruct linguistic systems that we have no direct record of, and will consider what it means for languages to diverge and converge. Major themes of the course will be the comparative method and the relationship between socio-linguistics and historical linguistics. The topics of language shift, language endangerment and death, language birth, and language planning will also be addressed, and assigned work and projects will develop the skills to conduct historical linguistics research through exploitation of electronic and library resources

5. Pre-requirements for this course (if any):

Introduction to linguistics ENGL215

6. Co-requisites for this course (if any): None

7. Course Main Objective(s):

By the end of the course, students should be able to:

1. Grasp the key ideas, concepts, issues, scope, theories and approaches of Historical and Comparative Linguistics.
2. Know the classification of the major language families and their role in understanding language.
3. Link language history with its present situation.
4. Realize and interpret the phenomenon of language Change and see its link with socio-cultural change.
5. Become aware of the phenomenon of Language Attrition/Loss and the Endangered Languages.
6. Compare and contrast English and Arabic (in terms of history, phonology, morphology, syntax, pragmatics and discourse) and discuss the implications of these differences for Arabic-speaking EFL learners.

7. Explain and discuss particular topics in Historical and Comparative Linguistics such as: Borrowing, Cognates, Lexicostatistics, Grammaticalisation, Reanalysis, etc.
8. Discuss the relationship between Contrastive Analysis and Comparative Linguistics.
9. Discuss the relationship between Comparative Linguistics and Linguistic Typology and Linguistic Contact.
10. Conduct a research project in the context of Historical and Comparative Linguistics
